Edwardsville, IL, July 7, 2014 – As the first rounds of CCL licenses arrive, more and more gun owners will be carrying concealed weapons. But without any clearly defined liability spelled out in the FCCA, anyone carrying a concealed weapon—even with a license—may still be at risk for legal prosecution.

Sivia Business & Legal Services, P.C. (SBLS) developed the Gun Owner's Protection Plan to safeguard the gun owners' personal liability should their weapon be discharged. Gun owners are provided a 1-800 telephone number giving them access to an attorney, 24/7.

“Unfortunately, the law neglects to assign when and where gun owners have the right to discharge their weapons,” explains Todd Sivia, managing partner of Sivia Business & Legal Services. “As we have seen in other cases, it is imperative that if an incident should occur, gun owners need to have an attorney with them as soon as possible.”

In addition to the membership card with a toll-free number, Gun Owner's Protection Plan includes annual legal weapons safety training, discounts on a gun trust and other SBLS services, and step-by-step instructions detailing how to handle a firearms incident.

Ultimately, however, Sivia says the plan's primary benefit is peace of mind.

“The FCCA will eventually be more clearly defined—but that will happen through legal precedent,” declares Sivia. “I do not want any of my clients to be a test case.”
